Join Dr. Sarah Murray, the faculty director for 'Global Ghana,' as she shares information about this exciting new semester-long program in Accra, Ghana.

The focus of the program is the complex intersections in the past and present between modern Ghana and the African diaspora in the southeastern United States. We will answer questions such as: What are the connections between Ghana and the US? How do both countries influence each other's music, food, innovation, and fashion? When did the connections in our politics and economics have their historical beginnings?

In this semester, students will discover the historic and contemporary ties connecting western Africa to the US diaspora, examining topics ranging from the west African slave trade to the Pan-African movement and beyond.

Students from three schools, Rhodes, Centre, and Sewanee, will take part in this unique liberal arts collaboration examining these intriguing and important questions. Rhodes financial aid is portable and students are eligible for need- and merit-based study abroad scholarships.

Courses Are Pending Approval.

We Plan To Offer:

- Globalization and the Challenges of Development in Ghana
- Ghanaian Popular Music
- Ghana and West Africa's Pasts in the Black Atlantic
- Perspectives on Culture and Communication in the Ghanaian Context
- Academic Internships are possible
